The file in question has a lock until the user logs in and has changed the password. If the user logs out then will the lock be released? Also can a file be locked by more than one process? A: The Javadocs for Files.delete() state this, Deletes the file denoted by this abstract pathname. The file is deleted or moved to the Deleted directory. If the file is currently locked by another process then an IOException is thrown. This operation is not supported on Windows 95/98/NT/2000. For these platforms this method first unlinks the file and then deletes it. Thus, yes it is safe to call on a locked file. Note that the Javadocs do not mention the case for a locked file, however that would only happen because the
