----- Meet in the paradise! This game is a casual battle royale with unique characters are now available! Battle Royale gameplay experience experience not yet been completed. You're going to enjoy a match of first and third person views and be gripped by the incredibly atmospheric battle that will be published to Youtube by the end of this year! New Battle Royale game is coming and this is the teaser video! This game is based off of Shadow of the Colossal game engine and the world setting is pretty dark! It's set in Antarctica and a cold beast is known as The Colossal! Welcome to Royale Battle, a new game style of Battle Royale in which the players are tearing and looting the buildings one after the other. The surviving players are getting a chance to get the weapons and ammo as the buildings are exploding! The game is dynamic, realistic, fierce and thrilling. Battle Royale is the huge battle in which a group of players enter the building and the sole aim is to kill other players. The gun is going to be the most important part of this game; the players can only have one gun. The player will find a rifle to shoot another player. Another thing that is going to be exciting is that the weapon will only have 10 shots. The game is loosely based off of a video game called Shadow of the Colossus. I hope you enjoy the game! The Green Player stands at the starting point of the game, he's a walker. In a Game Mode like Battle Royale, who stands at the start is usually the Most Wanted player! The Blue Player stands at the point of origin and can drop the bomb, he's a Bomber. Then there's the Red Player, a Shooter and the Yellow Player, an Infantry Gunner. Each player starts with a Single Weapon, and this can be either an Infinitizer or an Infinitione. The Different Weapon types are: Flamethrower Flashbunger Shrapnel Launcher Rocket Launcher Gauss Shotgun Projectile Launcher The Infinitizer is a short distance weapon, the Infinitione is a longer distance weapon. When an Infinitizer or Infinitione hits the Green Player, he loses control and runs into the air, where he can shoot

The world is besieged by an unknown virus that has mutated the disease into an extremely dangerous menace. Pursued by the enigmatic corporate superpower known as the Systems Overlords, the player's only hope is a mysterious ex-government group known as the Overseers of Mankind, who have carried out a radical exercise to confront this enemy on a global scale: A high-tech rescue and recovery mission involving a scattered net of resistance groups on the verge of collapse. How to Play: In Deus Ex Machina you are given the mission of collecting data as you walk around a magnificent looking 3D environment. Playing as Adam Jensen, you can survive either alone or with a companion (your fellow agent Grace) using the equipment you pick up. The sole means of interaction is an agent-based movement system, dubbed the Body Fence, in which your movements are detected by a fleet of drones. The Body Fence is used not only to traverse the environments but also to interact with other characters. You'll want to avoid contact with NPC characters but if you do find one, be careful. They can sometimes be dangerous, especially when the enemy's eyes are open. But that's not all there is to do in the game. You'll find a variety of items and encounters, including many that you can't quite figure out at the moment. What's all this got to do with computer graphics? Easy, you see. But first, let's discuss the game's setting: Inspiration: Deus Ex Machina is not, I repeat, is not a remake of the original game (2000) or of that port (2003) which was a 7-bit version of the game. It's also not based on the PC version (1995) released by Interplay at the same time. I was asked by a few people, how it was possible to make a Deus Ex Machina game with recorded music? I found the answer to the question, there is an absolutely wonderful team of game developers, who can take game ideas and make them come to life. They are truly talented people, who have to be commended for their creative and technical efforts. They include: Richard Dawkins Anita Neiman Tom Howard I have the utmost
