books by subhash palekar in hindiThe U.S. economy is the foundation of the Democratic Party. Everything they stand for is rooted in the defense of the U.S. economy. Their whole platform is based on attacks on the rich and middle-class, mostly by taking over the well-paid positions and ensuring that there are no effective competitive forces for what's left to be paid. Therefore, very much like all populist movements, they need to convince people that the nation's well-being is in danger and that the solution will come from them (this is why they hired the Muslims). "guardians" of the country. They know that there's an attack on them, but they think that the attack is a frontal attack on the country, which is where it should be. But, with the Democrats, they think that they are the victim and that they are losing because of someone else. This was true even before Trump. In an economy, the most important people to understand are the manufacturers. Those are the ones that buy their raw materials, employ their people, and build their products. They're the main reason for everything being built in the country. For a person, that's where they start working. But, when the job is done, they can go to the higher levels of the economy and get their package of benefits. That's the only reason that we have benefits — because it benefits the private sector in the long run. The whole idea of the left is that you remove the benefits that the private sector has and pay for it with socialist benefits. They seem to think that the private sector does not create wealth, that it just consumes what it has. This is where Keynesian theory enters in. But in 0cc13bf012
